ADVERTISEMENT.

THE fabrication of Provincial Copper Coins having apparently ceased, and several descriptive catalogues being already published, it may be necessary to state the grounds upon which the present publication was undertaken, and to point out the principles upon which it has been formed. Without detracting from the acknowledged merit of industry due to the compilers of the two most considerable catalogues that have been printed (viz.) those of Birchall and Conder, it will be sufficient to observe that each contains, with little or no discrimination as to authenticity, an account of almost every modern coin, as well provincial as colonial, and small medal, that had come to their knowledge, whether counterfeits of genuine coins, or forming a part of that immense quantity of trash fabricated from dies made merely for sale, or the endless varieties (not unaptly termed mules) produced by a combination of dies not originally intended for the same coin*.

In the year 1795, a publication of mine appeared, containing representations of the coins in my own collection, but being engraved as I could procure them, they were not arranged with any regularity, and a few were represented that are not provincial coins.

That work being incomplete from the reasons above assigned, and great numbers of genuine tokens having been issued since, I was induced to think that a certain guide to discriminate true from counterfeit tokens, would be highly useful to collectors, and not unentertaining to the general reader. I therefore undertook the present work, and hope it will be found that I have, with an even hand, rejected every false, and inserted every genuine token that has been manufactured.

In forming the collection now laid before the public, my principle of selection has been the following:—First, to admit all tokens actually made for the purpose of circulation, and bearing upon the edge or face of the coin the place where payable, and by whom†. These are most indubitably provincial coins—secondly, I have admitted tokens not made for circulation as halfpence or pence, but rather as substantial cards of address, pointing out the trade and residence of the issuer—thirdly, private tokens, made for collectors, and patterns for tokens—and lastly, tokens certainly made for circulation, but without any name of place, or proprietor; these are arranged by themselves on the two last plates‡.

It may be asked how I have been enabled, and upon what data, to distinguish in every case the genuine coins from the spurious.—To this I answer, that more than three fourths of the genuine tokens were manufactured at Birmingham, and my acquaintance with the respective artists at the time they were made, added to the recent information given me in the most handsome manner by Messrs. Hancock, Kempson, Lutwyche, Wyon, Dixon, &c. enables me unequivocally to assert that my statement of the tokens struck at Birmingham is correct, and that whatever are omitted in the following plates, and unnoticed in the appendix, were certainly made for sale, or fraudulent circulation, and do not come under either of the four classes above named.

Information respecting tokens made in London has been furnished by Mr. Milton (who kindly gave a most minute account of all in which he was employed) by Miss Banks, Mr. Young, and others perfectly well informed upon the subject.

A very considerable number still remains to be accounted for, and a reference to the appendix will shew that no trouble has been spared in procuring authentic documents respecting them.

* Mr. Lambe and Mr. Jelly, of Bath, who were collectors, and also Mr. Prentice, of Bury, have contributed in no small degree to the number of mules, by an extravagant combination of their own dies.—The medalets of London, Birmingham, Coventry, Gloucester, and Bath, estimable as some of them are for the beauty of their execution, and all, from the desirable representations they present of the public buildings of those places, are rigidly to be separated and distinguished from coins or tokens.

† A few also will be found on which the name of the proprietor does not appear, but they were certainly made for circulation.

‡ The despicable execution of most of the Irish coins, together with the impossibility of the publisher's obtaining authentic information respecting them, determined him to omit them entirely.

Among the rejected pieces will be found many whereon not only the name of some town appears, but also a pretended proprietor adds weight to the deception. Abundance of such were fabricated in London, when the unbounded passion for collecting caused a ready sale, and furnished a temptation for the making of such trash as I believe many collectors are now astonished they could be duped by. Most coins, however, of this description have long been thrown aside by the judicious collector, and it is not, perhaps, in many instances that this work will admit of a further reduction.

But while the present publication (professedly undertaken as a kind of vade mecum to collectors) exhibits representations or descriptions of all the genuine tokens, and it is to be inferred, consequently, that in the immense heap of recently made copper coins, none which are here unnoticed, should be admitted into a well formed collection; it is particularly the duty of the publisher to guard his readers against another species of fraud by which, as it is but little known, they are more likely to be deceived. It should therefore be understood that Mr. J. Westwood, junior, late of Birmingham, has copied the Monogram Anglesey penny, Southampton halfpenny, and several other tokens (particular notice of which is taken in the appendix) in a manner that although a comparison with the originals would certainly detect the imposition, yet as few collectors can have opportunities of such comparison, I think it necessary to give this caution. To the ingenuity of the same person the public is indebted for a series of half halfpence, as he has called them, and some halfpence and pence—the prototypes of most of which are genuine halfpenny tokens. These are specious, and may be unwarily bought, but I beg leave to remark, however specious any token may be, if it is unnoticed in the present work, there is every reason to believe it spurious. London has also had its share in frauds of this nature, but the wretched execution of the pieces will at once point out the imposition*.

It seems highly necessary, while assigning reasons for the rejection of many pieces heretofore considered as provincial tokens, to satisfy the public of the authenticity of all that are engraved, because many varieties of dies and designs were generally unknown till their appearance in the present work. That there should be many such varieties will not be thought extraordinary, when it is considered how liable the dies are to be broken, sometimes with the first blank that is put in the press, and often when not more than a dozen tokens have been struck. These were never sent to the proprietor, but reserved by the manufacturer, and sold at an advanced price, as some compensation for his loss, while the quantity for circulation was struck from a different die. This will account for many varieties; others arose from a die being disapproved either by the artist or proprietor of the token, in which case only a few specimens were taken off. But to remove all possibility of doubt, I have the permission of referring any collector to Mr. Welch, of Birmingham, in whose cabinet are the originals from which the engravings were made, as also for the observations in the appendix, except in a few instances where a reference is given to the collection in which the coins will be found. Having had communication with many collectors, and access to several choice collections, I am not conscious of any material omission. I here beg leave to acknowledge my obligations to Mr. Welch for constant access to and the use of his coins, as well as for much information and assistance in the progress of the work; I also return thanks to Miss Banks, of Soho Square; Mr. Sharp, of Coventry; Mr. Barker, of Birmingham; Mr. Miles, and Mr. Young, of London; and the several other collectors who have allowed me to inspect their collections.

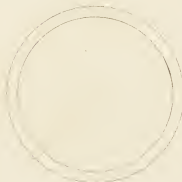

The appendix contains a body of information which, if it is received with a degree of estimation proportionate to the labour and pains bestowed upon the subject, will be an ample reward for all my attention to it. I think it cannot fail of proving highly acceptable; and that I shall at least have the credit of perseverance in collecting for many authentic and not uninteresting documents.

C. PYE.

BIRMINGHAM, September 4, 1801.

* It may be proper to remark that, to the publisher's knowledge, a collector (whose name for obvious reasons is omitted) in which it is difficult to procure a large variety of a coin, by means of filing and chasing a common impression of the same coin, contrived to patch up an imitation of the variety. In an artist this would be a direct fraud, what it may be in a collector let the public determine. To say the least, it is assuming the appearance of possessing what he has not; and if he parts with one of them, it may be the means of imposing upon an unsuspicious purchaser.

r, r, r. * 21. 2s. has been sold for 5l. 5s. This has been counterfeited by J. Weitwood, jun. In the O. of counterfeit there are only 5 acorns instead of 6 on the right side of the wreath, and R. the top of the P. and the first stroke of the M. do not touch. There is also a halfpenny from the same design, fabricated by J. Weitwood, junior, for sale.

r, r, r. There is another with E. fame as No. 2, 1l. 1s.

In collar, c, several different dies

In collar, c, several different dies of this and the next

In collar, c, fine impressions of this and the last r, r

PLATE II.

1	Anglesey	Ditto	Ditto	Paris Mine Co.	Several Ton	In collar, c
2	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	A few proofs	r, r, r, r. This is not so well executed as the left, and was therefore rejected. Only two in copper, and one in tin, known to exist.
3	Ditto	Wilfon	Williams	Ditto	Ditto	In collar, r, r, r, r. This is much finer work than the next; only three impressions known
4	Ditto	Ditto	Williams	Ditto	Ditto	r, r, r, 1l. 1s. After these dies were injured, a quantity was worked off with a plain E. and sold at 1s. each. This O. has also been used with several counterfeit reverses
5	Ditto	Hancock	Boulton	Ditto	Ditto	In collar, c. Fine impressions, r, r
6	Ditto	Ditto	Paris Mine Co's Mint	Ditto	Ditto	In collar, r, r, r. There is another nearly similar to this, but not so finely executed, in Mr. Sharp's collection
7	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	In collar, r

N. B. Of the different kinds of Anglesey pennies at least 250 ton weight were made at the Paris Mine Co's Mint, and about 50 ton of halfpence. The genuine pennies are dated 1787, 1788, 1790 and 1791; the halfpence 1788, 1789, 1790, and 1791; all other dates are spurious.

PLATE III.

1	Anglesey	Hancock	Paris Mine Co's Mint	Paris Mine Co.	Proof	r, r, r, r. In Mr. G. Barker's collection. It was at first intended to have called the halfpence without an inscription on the edge
2	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Several ton	c. Several different dies
3	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Proof	r, r, r, r. There is another without the wreath, and a third nearly similar to No. 4 but with an open wreath
4	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	A few proofs	r, r, r. 10s. 6d.
5	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	In collar, rev. 1788, r, r, r, r. rev. 1789, r, r, r. 1l. 1s. There are a few proofs in tin without the oak on the crown, dated 1788. There is also a penny, date 1789, and a halfpenny, date 1787, of similar design to this, made by Weitwood for sale
6	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Several ton	c. Several different dies
7	Ditto	Ditto	Boulton	Ditto	A few proofs	In collar, r, r, r. There is a counterfeit of this date with O. nearly resembling No. 3
8	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Several ton	In collar, c , several different dies
9	Ditto	Ditto	Hancock	Ditto	A few proofs	r, r
10	Ditto	Wilfon	Williams	Ditto	A few proofs	In collar, c , several different dies, one, date 1790, in Mr. Young's collection; also a counterfeit with an engraved edge

N. B. Great pains having been taken to procure all the varieties of genuine Anglesey coins, any that materially differ from those engraved in this work may be considered as spurious. Several hundred ton of counterfeits and imitations have been made, which may in general be discovered by the inferiority of the workmanship. There are no genuine Anglesey farthings.

* Where a sum is put down it is the price at which, to the proprietor's knowledge, such coins have been publicly sold.

† When no remark is made, the coins are struck without a collar.

9 Ditto	Wyon	Kempion	P. Deck	5 cwt.	c
10 Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	J. Gocr	5 cwt.	c

PLATE XII.

1 Burnt Island	Dixon	Lutwyche	B. I. V. Co.	3 cwt.	c
2 Buxton	Wyon	Kempion	W. R. Hay	6 impressions	In collar, r, r, r, r. O. Die broke. There are a few impressions of this R. with O. No. 3, when the R. also broke
3 Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	About 200 imp.	In collar, r
4 Birmingham	Hancock, jun.	Ditto	T. Welch	3 doz.	In collar, r, r. Private token, 15s 6d. There are a few unfinished of this, and of No. 8.
5 Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	G. Barker	4 impressions	In collar, r, r, r. Private token. Die altered to No. 6
6 Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	8 impressions	In Collar, r, r, r, r. Private token. A mistake being made in young Hancock's age, and also in the rev. ; No. 7 was made
7 Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	6 impressions	In collar, r, r, r, r. Private token. Dies broke. O. fiasco No. 6, except that the small letters under the head are taken out, and "born 17-8, died 1778" are placed on a ribbon. E. "by George Barker, Birmingham."
8 Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto	2 doz.	There are also 12 impressions in tin In collar, r, r. Private token. This, and the four tokens immediately preceding, are so well executed, that many persons have doubted their being J. G. H. junior's work. This has induced his father to make an affidavit that they were entirely engraved by his son; and the gentlemen for whom they were made declare they are perfectly convinced of the truth of this affidavit. By the parish register of St. Phillip's, Birmingham, it appears that J. G. H. junior, was born the 24th of June, 1791.
9 Ditto	Willett's	Ditto	B. Jacobs	9 doz.	In collar, r
10 Brechin	Ditto	Ditto	Smith & Wilson	3 cwt.	In collar, with the E. r, r; with plain E. r; variety with superscription on the rev. similar to the E. c
